

The 13th Annual Scientific Assembly of the Israeli Association for EM
Tel Aviv, ISRAEL, March 10-11, 2008

Shalom, Dear Scientific Assembly Participants,

On behalf of the Organizing Committee of the 13th Annual Assembly of the Israeli Association for Emergency Medicine (IAEM) I would like to welcome all of you. March is a particularly beautiful time to visit the Holy Land; the weather is expected to be friendly and the entire countryside will be filled with blooming flowers and green trees. We spared no effort in making this Assembly a memorable one. This conference has discipline specific educational tracks that focus on the specific learning needs of various emergency health care providers: emergency physicians, emergency department nurses and EMS providers.

The 2-day long scientific program for emergency physicians is varied and rich. Day 1 is filled with interactive workshops, of the highest academic standard provided by leading North American and Israeli experts. Day 2 is composed of seven different educational tracks. Whereas the overall approach to this 13th Assembly focuses mainly on identified, local needs, we are confident that our foreign colleagues will get full value from the contents of the meeting. We are confident in this assertion, as some state of the art presentations are being presented. Additionally, the scientific presentations will provide for a forum where local and international participants can exchange views, share ideas and learn from each other. The educational program has requested approval for Continuing Professional Development credits by some leading associations in Emergency Medicine in North America.

I hope that all of you will return home energized, with fabulous memories and with a large list of new friends.

Yours Sincerely,

Itai Shavit, MD
